Marion Stolen Car Mystery Turns Into Comedy of Errors.

The old game of button button who's got the button was played with variations for more than an hour here last night.

Dusang climbed into the front seat but Gearheiser, noticing the license plates said "Wait a minute that's not my car."

Next to the place where the car was parked was an open space and the two men concluded Gearheiser's car had been stolen.

He Takes the Blame This will teach me to take the keys out after this," Gearheiser grumbled as he and Dusang started to the police station to report the machine stolen.

Before they left the station however the situation became still more complicated. While they were waiting the police telephone rang.

With nothing else to do but go home Gearheiser and Dusang called a taxi to take them to Oakland Heights.

Imagine their surprise when as they rounded the corner at Duane and Center streets they saw Gearheiser's car exactly where they had parked it some time before.

Check up Starts With the stolen car found they returned to the police station to report the find.

LINDY RANSOM REPORTED SEEN

Three Carloads of G Men Speed from Boston but Say Sortie Is Target Practice

KARPIS RUMORED AROUND

Paper Tells of Gold Notes Exchanged in New York and New England Banks

By The Associated Press BOSTON, April 25.—Faced with recurrent reports that $20,000 in Lindbergh ransom money had turned up in New England in the past two weeks federal agents today emphatically explained away an armed man's sortie as target practice.

The reports published by the Boston Post were emphatically denied by Clarence D. McKernan, head of the Boston bureau of the department of justice.

There is absolutely nothing to it, he insisted. Unusual activity among federal agents has been evident in this area recently, causing speculation about their move.

The ransom money report came on the heels of another that Alvin Karpis wanted in connection with the Bremer kidnapping was in New England.

But on their return McKernan asserted the men had merely been out to target practice.

In Chicago Bernard M. Linnigan, attorney for Stephen Spitz, convicted forger who claimed to have purchased $7,000 of the ransom money and cashed them somewhere in New York state, called the reports a new book.

ROOSEVELT TO GIVE SPEECH IN NEW YORK CITY

State and National Leaders Will Attend Conclave, Talk Goes on Air at 10 30 P M

NEW LEAGUE ORGANIZED

'Good Neighbor' Group To Fight for Administration Policies and Against Its Foes

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Conspicuous work on one of the last projects he will work before the June conventions President Roosevelt prepared today to head for New York City to address the National Democratic club there to night.

With new duties and their opponents warning to the campaign fight there was much guessing as to the topic of the speech and whether Mr. Roosevelt would unloose an attack on the opposing camp.

Many state and national leaders, Tammany chiefs and others will be in the audience to hear the speech which will be broadcast at 10 30 p m.

Other party leaders at Philadelphia planned to the work of planning for their national convention there in June.

Into the national scene today came a newly organized 'Good Neighbor' league. One of its organizers said it would fight for certain new deal policies as opposed to those of the American Liberty league.

Dr. Stanley High, Protestant clergyman recently engaged to do organization work for the Democratic national committee and a member of the new league's executive committee said today.

We just intend to go ahead with our program and if in doing so we offend anyone who is opposed to the American Liberty league we should accept the consequences.

Went Fight League However, we have no desire to revive the American Liberty league which is moribund by comparison.

Some of our ideas are those of Franklin D. Roosevelt while some are his own. We are from both the Republican and the Democratic national committees there came a crossfire of pamphlets.

The Republican issued an eight page tracture describing as a plot a review of the Roosevelt record. On the front page was a picture of the President.

Says O. S. U. Still Runs Despite Upstart After Vetoing of $1,000,000 in Appropriations

Special to The Star KENTON, April 25.—Gov. Harry J. Davis today defended his administration in a two hour speech in a common pleas court room here last night.

Challenging any period in the records of Ohio government the governor pointed to the legislative record of his regime, upheld the economic achievements during his term and launched upon his conflict with George W. Highmire, president of Ohio state university.

Wants Liquor Unit We as Democrats must stand together which does not mean that we agree with everything the President does, he said.

Increased values in agriculture, real estate, property, manufacturing, holdings, stocks and bonds make the national debt look like a piker's dream.

The governor referred to the newspapers which he said have been singing his praises in reverse.

Love letters exchanged with President Highmire were mentioned in the governor's speech as Ohio State is still running regardless of the $1,000,000 appropriation vetoed by him.

Ohio State was linked by Gov. Davis because they were too close, an other reason was that they did not trust their governor's right.

We are friendly now though I have authorized the state highway department to put the football players on the payroll again," he said.

Cites Pensioners Relief In speaking of economies in the state administration, Davis pointed to the old age pension, additional relief loans and salary reductions the latter made over my protest making a greater cost with need for more economy.

Favorite Son Wants President Who Will Admit Something Cannot Be Had for Nothing.

ASSAILS SPENDING

Labels Roosevelt Policy 'Four Years of Priming Pump Without Being Able To Start It'

Special to The Star KENTON, April 25.—Robert A. Taft, Cincinnati attorney and son of a former President, assailed new deal expenditures and practices in an address to 500 persons at a Republican rally here last night.

He urged his listeners to help elect a President next fall "who will not be afraid to tell the people they can't have something for nothing and that prosperity depends wholly on thrift and industry."

Labeling the administration's spending program to four years of priming the pump with billions of dollars without being able to start it, he said only two courses lie open to balance the budget if such expenditures are continued.

One he said is inflation, which would "sweep away savings wreck insurance companies and little by little and the other is increased taxes which would fall on ordinary workers and increase the cost of living."

How Is Billion Dollar Deficit? Mr. Taft declared the federal government has created a 15 billion dollar deficit in little more than three years.

Assessing relief efforts could be cut in half if bureaucracy were eliminated, he said. The loss of the administration is doing anything you want you can have anything or not you have anything in pay with it.

Of the corporation tax law now before congress Mr. Taft said, "It's unfair and a means of robbing the rich by leaving them no surplus for operations in hard times."

Income Tax Increase If industry were restored to a normal basis the billion income would be increased 30 billion annually whereas there would be only 15 billion in transfer if all rich men were made paupers and the money were distributed he said.

Apperting the administration's apparent desire to let business men how to run their businesses and to direct the lives of farmers he predicted the President if re-elected probably would appoint members in the supreme court who would give constitutionality to programs resembling the NRA and the AAA.

The new deal deals cover up the real policy of this administration he asserted fundamentally. It seeks to change the entire system direct the lives and destinies of individuals and business men throughout the United States. It doesn't seek to correct the mistakes but to amend them, money, regulate prices, control business and tell farmers what they can raise.

MUSKINGUM PROJECT SAFETY ANGLE CITED

Engineer Says Area Will Be Able To Withstand Greater Storms Than Those of 1913.

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, O., April 23—Residents of the rolling Muskingum watershed received assurance today that they soon would be able to withstand storms of one third greater intensity than those which caused the 1913 flood.

Lieut. Col. J. D. Arthur, in charge of army engineers of the Muskingum conservancy district, predicted completion of the project by June, 1939. He said the 14 dams under construction also would lower the Ohio river flood crest by six feet and "therefore will be a step in the direction of control of the Mississippi flood waters."

Col. Arthur addressed a meeting of 300 officials of federal and state agencies last yesterday called by the national emergency council, headed by Brig. Gen. Bendict Crowell.

He said the project was 35 per cent complete.

Charles Michelson, publicity director for the Democratic, attacked the American Liberty league and Frank Kent, columnist, in his weekly clipper.

An attack on Postmaster General Farley came last night from Col. Frank Knox, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. In a statement addressed to President Roosevelt, he declared:

Says Postoffice Wrecked. "Under Mr. Farley's benevolence the spirit of the postoffice department has been nearly wrecked. In 1933 a total of 3,390 presidential postmasters were confirmed by the senate. Out of 3,890 only 25 postal employees saw advancement from the ranks."

Arguments for and against the new deal were presented last night before a mock "national convention" of Northwestern university students at Evanston, Ill.

Shikat's Defeat Embroils Suit Alvarez Started

Some Believe Action To Void Contract Will Be Halted as Result of Bout.

By The Associated Press. COLUMBUS, O., April 23—Dick Shikat was in the midst of new complexities today following his defeat in Detroit last night by the grinning Turk, Ali Baba, and the consequent loss of his claim to the world's heavyweight championship.

What effect the defeat would have on the suit of Joe Alvarez of Boston, matchmaker for Promoter Paul Bowser, against Shikat and Ali Haft, Columbus promoter, was conjectural. Some said it would end the action to declare valid the contract Alvarez says he holds over Shikat and to get an accounting of Shikat's receipts under Haft's management. Some said it wouldn't.

Haft and Alvarez each contend Shikat is their sole property, but Federal Judge Melville Underwood in the referee in this tangle and he is expected to rule next week.

To mix it up further, Shikat, who was injured in the bout, asserted from his hospital bed in Detroit that Ali Baba had fouled him by throwing him from the ring onto the ring-side chairs.

But Tom Backus of St. Louis, Underwood's referee, said Judge Underwood decided on the basis of testimony, which closed yesterday until Monday morning.

The testimony brought out interesting data on the "inside" workings of the mat game, but Shikat, on the defense, promises more startling disclosures when he gets a chance to give his version next week.

Among the interesting charges aired during the Thursday and Friday sessions, some in open arguments by counsel and others in examination and cross-examination of prosecution witnesses, were:

That a group of six promoters, including Jack Curley of New York, Bowser, Ed White of Chicago, Tom Backus of St. Louis, Ray Fabiani of Philadelphia, and Joe (Toots) Mondt of Los Angeles, signed a contract to share profits of their various promotional ventures.

That Shikat, in winning the heavyweight title March 2 from Dan O'Mahoney in Madison Square Garden, ignored an "order" to lose and "retired" the fightman, and that Alvarez, although claiming that he was Shikat's manager, never signed a contract for a match for the wrestler, never paid him any money, or secured any matches for him.

'MR. DOOLEY,' FAMOUS WIT, TAKEN BY DEATH

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, April 23—A famous shaft of wit and wisdom which once made the mythical "Mr. Dooley" a byword of American households were recalled today with the death of Finley Peter Dunne, creator of this delightful character.

Dunne, writing in various Chicago newspapers shortly before and after the turn of the century, used the name of "Martin Dooley" as a character who spoke with Irish dialect and humor upon the various problems of the times.

It was "Mr. Dooley" who commented on a supreme court decision which held that the United States Constitution operated in the insular possessions.

"No wonder whether the Constitution follows the flag or not," the supreme court follows the "illicit return."

Likewise, it was "Mr. Dooley" who claimed Admiral George Dewey as a cousin. Some spelled the name "Dewey" and others "Dooley," Dunne's character explained, but the difference of spelling was not important he said, and he was proud indeed of "Cousin George's" accomplishments.

Admiral Dewey later wrote Dunne a note of appreciation. "Dunne's" death occurred last night at the New York hotel where he had lived for several years. He was 65. He had been ill five months from cancer.

The noted writer began his journalistic career when 19 years old and within three years was city editor of the Chicago Times. Later he worked for the Chicago Evening Post, the Chicago Times-Herald, the Journal, and the Chicago Tribune. He was editor of the Journal from 1897 to 1900 and left Chicago for residence in New York in 1902.

The governor's wife was also introduced. H. H. Hartman, chairman of the Crawford county executive committee presided and also headed the parade which escorted the governor from the city limits. Taking part in the parade was the Ohio National guard field artillery band.

Charles Kantrier, local boss, sang three songs before the speaking program.

Several officials privately expressed the opinion that water rates have been left at an unusually low level because any administration that raised them might become politically unpopular. There are other indications that the city has made a number of extensions of water lines to serve one or two outlying residences, although the revenue from these homes would not justify the cost of the extensions.

The frequent changes in the personnel of the plant, pointed out by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, is regarded as another result of political interference with the plant's operation.

Comparison of Mansfield, with one of the lowest water rates in the state, and Marion, which has one of the highest, provides proof that the number of consumers and the amount of water they use do not pend largely on rates. In the 1930 census, Mansfield had only 2,000 more residents than Marion, yet the Mansfield waterworks has 11,000 consumers as compared with Marion's 6,400. In Marion the average daily consumption of water is less than 1,000,000 gallons, whereas in Mansfield it averages around 4,000,000.

Low rates in Mansfield have held industrial consumers, which pay approximately $33,000 a year for the plant, while in Marion the industrial income of the water company was only $5,833 last year.

Regarding the underwriters' report, Mr. McMullen said the plant has not been given large enough operating budgets to keep pumps and motors in efficient operating condition. He said several of the pumps have been in use many years and have had virtually no repairs. He expressed opinion that the cost of repairs would more than be offset by savings in operating costs, but added the plant has had no funds to make the needed repairs.

An outbreak of typhoid fever in recent weeks also complicated Mansfield's waterworks financial problems, requiring an expenditure for equipment to chlorinate the water. One hundred and forty-seven cases of typhoid, including six that have been fatal, have been listed to date.

As a result of the emergency expenses arising this year, a council committee studying the waterworks problem has agreed a boost in water rates is virtually the only way the necessary revenue can be raised.

The council committee has recommended that a water survey firm locate all of the hidden leaks, which Councilman Fred Miller estimated are costing the city $2,000 daily on the basis of consumer meter readings, and that a $20,000 WPA project be sought for the leak survey and a repair program.

Councilman Charles Shultz, chairman of the committee, recently asserted the city has made no effort "to provide financially for depreciation and worn out equipment of the plant."

"It's fortunate for the city that the water system, bound to break up some time, reached a crisis at the present time when it is possible to get federal help financially," he said.

Mayor Earl A. McFarland has suggested that a $10 annual minimum bill for domestic users instead of the present $5 charge would not be excessive and would help raise the needed funds.

City officials interviewed by The Star asserted Mansfield's minimum domestic charge of $6 a year is too low. This is one-third of the $18 minimum bill paid annually by Marion domestic users and is approximately one-half of the average minimum charge of $11.91 in seven cities surveyed by The Star.

Mansfield officials pointed out the plant is not self-supporting and self-liquidating on the present rate schedule. They referred to records in the office of City Auditor Paul Kelly showing $248,500 in general taxation bonds have been issued for waterworks purposes in the last 10 years. These are being paid off by taxpayers, whereas a self-supporting plant would meet the bond payments from the income from the sale of water. Auditor Kelly said only $58,000 in bonds payable from water plant receipts are outstanding.

In the 1930 census, Mansfield had only 2,000 more residents than Marion, yet the Mansfield waterworks has 11,000 consumers as compared with Marion's 6,400. In Marion the average daily consumption of water is less than 1,000,000 gallons, whereas in Mansfield it averages around 4,000,000.

Low rates in Mansfield have held industrial consumers, which pay approximately $33,000 a year for the plant, while in Marion the industrial income of the water company was only $5,833 last year.

Regarding the underwriters' report, Mr. McMullen said the plant has not been given large enough operating budgets to keep pumps and motors in efficient operating condition. He said several of the pumps have been in use many years and have had virtually no repairs. He expressed opinion that the cost of repairs would more than be offset by savings in operating costs, but added the plant has had no funds to make the needed repairs.

An outbreak of typhoid fever in recent weeks also complicated Mansfield's waterworks financial problems, requiring an expenditure for equipment to chlorinate the water. One hundred and forty-seven cases of typhoid, including six that have been fatal, have been listed to date.

As a result of the emergency expenses arising this year, a council committee studying the waterworks problem has agreed a boost in water rates is virtually the only way the necessary revenue can be raised.

The council committee has recommended that a water survey firm locate all of the hidden leaks, which Councilman Fred Miller estimated are costing the city $2,000 daily on the basis of consumer meter readings, and that a $20,000 WPA project be sought for the leak survey and a repair program.

Councilman Charles Shultz, chairman of the committee, recently asserted the city has made no effort "to provide financially for depreciation and worn out equipment of the plant."

"It's fortunate for the city that the water system, bound to break up some time, reached a crisis at the present time when it is possible to get federal help financially," he said.

Mayor Earl A. McFarland has suggested that a $10 annual minimum bill for domestic users instead of the present $5 charge would not be excessive and would help raise the needed funds.

City officials interviewed by The Star asserted Mansfield's minimum domestic charge of $6 a year is too low. This is one-third of the $18 minimum bill paid annually by Marion domestic users and is approximately one-half of the average minimum charge of $11.91 in seven cities surveyed by The Star.

Mansfield officials pointed out the plant is not self-supporting and self-liquidating on the present rate schedule. They referred to records in the office of City Auditor Paul Kelly showing $248,500 in general taxation bonds have been issued for waterworks purposes in the last 10 years. These are being paid off by taxpayers, whereas a self-supporting plant would meet the bond payments from the income from the sale of water. Auditor Kelly said only $58,000 in bonds payable from water plant receipts are outstanding.

Several officials privately expressed the opinion that water rates have been left at an unusually low level because any administration that raised them might become politically unpopular. There are other indications that the city has made a number of extensions of water lines to serve one or two outlying residences, although the revenue from these homes would not justify the cost of the extensions.

The frequent changes in the personnel of the plant, pointed out by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, is regarded as another result of political interference with the plant's operation.

Comparison of Mansfield, with one of the lowest water rates in the state, and Marion, which has one of the highest, provides proof that the number of consumers and the amount of water they use do not pend largely on rates. In the 1930 census, Mansfield had only 2,000 more residents than Marion, yet the Mansfield waterworks has 11,000 consumers as compared with Marion's 6,400. In Marion the average daily consumption of water is less than 1,000,000 gallons, whereas in Mansfield it averages around 4,000,000.

HARDING SENIOR CLASS TO BE SCHOOL'S LARGEST

School Officials Estimate Number of Graduates May Reach 311; Name of Speaker Announced.

The largest class ever to leave Harding High school will be graduated on June 5, according to school officials who place the number of seniors eligible for graduation at approximately 311.

Engagement of Major Norman A. Smith of Columbus, widely known editor and lecturer, as the commencement speaker has been announced by Supr. C. A. Hudson.

Arrangements also have been completed for the commencement ceremony, which will be held on Sunday, May 31, at 3 p. m. at the Epworth M. E. church. The Marion minister selected to deliver the sermon will be announced next week.

Major Smith, who has addressed the Marion Rotary club and the Marion County Teachers' association during the past winter, is a former instructor at Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind., and is at present an associate editor of the Columbus Dispatch. He is a Canadian by birth and is a World War veteran.

Before the class of 1936 leaves Harding High school there will have been a change in the present setup of the high school executive offices, and the gymnasium balcony will have been reopened.

Quarters on the first floor occupied by the superintendent of schools since the high school was built, until a few weeks ago when the work of remodeling the Lincoln school on South Prospect street into an administration building was completed, will in the near future be occupied by the high school principal.

The second floor outer office will be turned over to the men of the faculty as a recreation room during periods in which they do not have classes, and the inner office which is now occupied by Principal K. H. Marshall, will become a book room for the use of the rapidly growing school library.

Moving of school supplies to the administration building has made it possible for the high school to announce that the gymnasium balcony which has been waited for years to afford storage space will be required for use as a gallery for athletic contests and as orchestra space for school dances. With the change, it also will be possible to give the storage room at the west end of the gymnasium for the use of Miss Lucile Foreman, coach of dramatics, in storing costumes and play properties.

Great Work Accomplished
A SERMONETTE
By REV. WILLIAM M. DAVIS
Pastor, the Calvary Evangelical Church.

MOSES was keeping sheep in Midian. God told him to go and deliver Israel from bondage. He shrank from the task, but God did not wonder that he did; for he was without training in warfare and without any visible means of prosecuting the work. He had nothing but his shepherd's rod, cut out of a thicket, the mere crutch with which he guided his sheep.

Any day he might throw it away and get a better one. But God said to him: "What is in thine hand?" And he said, "A rod." God then told him that with that rod, that mere stick, he should save Israel. And so it proved.

"Use what is in thine hand," said the Lord. "This is the method by which all great works for God have been accomplished. Notice some Bible examples of how God has used little things to accomplish greater things, and get some of the lessons they teach."

What is in thine hand, Shamgar? It is an ox goad with which he urged his lazy heaules. Yet used for God, Shamgar's ox-goad defeated the Philistines. Suppose he had refused to use it because it was crude or small or ill-suited, as he thought, to the work. No such honor of the victory would have stood to the honor of Shamgar. There are people who are losing the honor of better victories today because they do not do their best with the things they already possess.

What is in thine hand David? It is only a sling, a little weapon he had made for pleasure or with which he kept the wolves away from his sheep. Yet with that sling he slew Goliath, whom the whole army of Israel dared not meet. Some of us have accomplishments we have never thought of more seriously than a source of some slight pleasure to ourselves or others. We can sing, or play an instrument, or draw, or paint a picture, or tell a story well. Have you ever thought of using your accomplishments for God? Or maybe it is some power you have gained in the pursuit of your business or profession. Whatever the accomplishment, whatever power you have developed, or skill you have cultivated, why not use it for God? You have no idea how much good it may result in if you will only use it, as David used his sling, in the name of the Lord of Hosts.

What is in thine hand poor widow? "Only two mites," did you say? Give them to God, and behold, the fame of your piety fills the world, and many others are led thereby to give, some out of their poverty, and some out of their abundance, and streams of money have flown into the Lord's treasury for the extension of His kingdom in the world as a result. Use what you have in your hand. Give from what you have now. Don't wait to grow rich and hope to give millions.

What is in thine hand, diligent Dorcas? My needle. Use it. Use it for God. And those coats and garments keep multiplying, and they are giving warmth to those that are cold and clothing the needy and naked still. There is no end to the hospital supplies and the orphan asylum furnishings, the sewing circle products and the charity donations that have fallen in finished form from the hand that piles Dorcas' needle.

The lesson is exactly the same in every case. It is that God wants us to serve Him now just where we are and with the things we happen just now to have. Moses, Shamgar, the poor widow and Dorcas, all accomplished great things for God. But they would not have done so had they refused to use the things they had at hand at the moment. The same influence on the part of Christians everywhere would hasten the completion of His bride, and the Saviour's return.

Great Work Accomplished
A SERMONETTE
By REV. WILLIAM M. DAVIS
Pastor, the Calvary Evangelical Church.

MOSES was keeping sheep in Midian. God told him to go and deliver Israel from bondage. He shrank from the task, but God did not wonder that he did; for he was without training in warfare and without any visible means of prosecuting the work. He had nothing but his shepherd's rod, cut out of a thicket, the mere crutch with which he guided his sheep.

Any day he might throw it away and get a better one. But God said to him: "What is in thine hand?" And he said, "A rod." God then told him that with that rod, that mere stick, he should save Israel. And so it proved.

"Use what is in thine hand," said the Lord. "This is the method by which all great works for God have been accomplished. Notice some Bible examples of how God has used little things to accomplish greater things, and get some of the lessons they teach."

What is in thine hand, Shamgar? It is an ox goad with which he urged his lazy heaules. Yet used for God, Shamgar's ox-goad defeated the Philistines. Suppose he had refused to use it because it was crude or small or ill-suited, as he thought, to the work. No such honor of the victory would have stood to the honor of Shamgar. There are people who are losing the honor of better victories today because they do not do their best with the things they already possess.

What is in thine hand David? It is only a sling, a little weapon he had made for pleasure or with which he kept the wolves away from his sheep. Yet with that sling he slew Goliath, whom the whole army of Israel dared not meet. Some of us have accomplishments we have never thought of more seriously than a source of some slight pleasure to ourselves or others. We can sing, or play an instrument, or draw, or paint a picture, or tell a story well. Have you ever thought of using your accomplishments for God? Or maybe it is some power you have gained in the pursuit of your business or profession. Whatever the accomplishment, whatever power you have developed, or skill you have cultivated, why not use it for God? You have no idea how much good it may result in if you will only use it, as David used his sling, in the name of the Lord of Hosts.

What is in thine hand poor widow? "Only two mites," did you say? Give them to God, and behold, the fame of your piety fills the world, and many others

Just Things

—BY EDNA S. DUTTON—

Zelda
THERE was tumultuous rejoicing in the home of one family this week over the return of an unique household pet. In fact the jubilation was so great that it brought to the family circle, it brought to the scene family friends and even strangers. Zelda, the family pet, a long shot and named her for sentimental reasons, may be only a frog to you, but that's because you don't know her and her accomplishments. We met Zelda by flashlight in her summer home, a pool in the garden the night of her return from spending the winter at some fashionable winter resort, and we were so impressed that we looked at her as though she had fared exceedingly well. Zelda has personality, believe it or not, and one's friendly urge rises to the surface immediately after introductions. But it was her apparent pleasure at being home again that impressed us, and there was nothing short of mutual admiration in the eyes of Zelda and her family as they looked at one another in the light of the flashlight. But to Zelda's talent, she sings. Not the staccato croak of the run of mine frog, but a long, lovely, mellow note something like a "pleat" only more musical that can be heard in the house and all over the garden. In fact that is the way Zelda and her family keep in touch with one another when distance prevents visibility. The family "pleat" is to Zelda, and she comes right back with a longer and perhaps a better one. And she's quite proud of her accomplishment, and rightly so. In fact she moved right up into the circle of light from the flashlight with the air of one determined to do her stuff better than ever before. Zelda's return was something of a surprise, although the family was hopeful. It was a neighbor boy who heard her first, and after the second call knew that it was Zelda, she had returned to her own home. The news to the household, and the members in turn called in the friends. "Zelda's back" was all that was necessary. Zelda left early last night, in fact it was late summer, after spending a happy season in a gorgeous garden pool. She went in for higher musical attainments when the family urged her on by setting the example in the form of "pleating." Sent as more or less of a joke by a family friend, she has since then been a joy in the neighborhood and something out of the ordinary in frogdom.

Going Places
ARE you one of those souls that is sure to find a taxi with only a vague idea of the location of your destination? The kind that makes drivers gnash their teeth and tear their hair, mentally of course. We plead guilty to that particular sin against transportation etiquette and can speak first-hand. It is frequently the cause of pink ears and much apologizing. In fact we were accused of just wanting a buggy ride when we were in a car down a street to a number of the kind of which there was none. So to you we were in a street too far. And we had it coming to us. "I'll know it when I see the house," is the general alibi and that's so enlightening to drivers whose business is to take folks where they want to go. They must, in the innermost depths of their hearts, hope there is a special place in Hades for such folks.

Signs
SOME of the times the Marion Clubs fine arts day program, which means that club season is about over; crisp curtains at highly polished windows; dodging the roller shutters; that tired feeling; wobbly lumps that never seem to be going the way they are looking; smoke rolling out of brooder houses; little pigs with white belts that look as though they had been freshly scrubbed.

Married Comrades
—BY ADELE GARRISON—
Lillian Interrupts Madge's Diving Into Past.
HAD ample time for pondering the problem presented by Lillian's dudgeon over the hypothesis that her young daughter, Marion, had a "hope chest," and was planning to get married.
Worn out by her journey, Lillian's sound slumber promised to last for hours, and I finally decided that it was useless for me even to try to get to sleep, so I sat up with infinite caution to a sitting posture, piled pillows behind me and settled down to read over my memories of Marion as recorded upon my mental camera.
How well I remembered that moment of dramatic revelation in Lillian's library when she, having won my heart and vanquished my jealousy by the sheer stalling worth of her had opened a concealed wall safe and brought forth from its recesses a miniature of an exquisitely lovely baby girl. Her face, when she handed it to me, was irradiated with motherly pride and love, but her eyes were tortured and heart-breaking.
Her voice did not falter, however, when she made the astounding revelation that the lovely pictured face was that of her own baby girl. It was a revelation I did not dream of, and then told me the almost incredible story of why she was separated from her child.
It was a story which explained Dicky's affectionate, almost reverential, admiration of her which had caused me so much uneasiness. I knew, as she talked, that nothing gave the desire to make me understand, to save my happiness, would have induced her to tell the story of this hidden treasure of her life. And when she had finished telling me of an innocent friendship with Dicky, one of a group of younger artists whom Lillian had befriended, she told of her caring for him during a sudden and dangerous attack of pneumonia when it might have meant death to send him away.
Became Her Friend
She told the story of how her altruism had been twisted and misinterpreted by her secondarily husband, who had made custody of her child the alternative to ruining Dicky's career by dragging him through an unavailing divorce case. I at once and forever became her loyal and admiring friend, sharing the eternal gratitude which I knew Dicky accorded her, and which had both grieved and puzzled me.
It had not been long after that interview when the death of Marion's father, and his deathbed clinging of his will plat against Lillian, had restored her little daughter to her arms. And from that moment, the wholesome child had been a part of my life as well. (Marion as a child, dancing like a fairy sprite into our hearts when she and her mother came to live with us after living underworld's disappearance; Marion confiding to me the secret of the lock box which before the old woman's death, the box which the old grandmother said contained her "fortune.")
Lillian Interrupts
Marion's lecture-drama of her stepfather when he first came back to her mother and an honorable place in the world; Marion's final capitulation to the big man's charm, and real affection for her; Marion going away to boarding school and returning upon holidays; Marion's meeting Donald Britton, and the

IMITATION OF YOUTH
The famous Dr. Steinhach is said to have discovered a new method of making youngsters out of oldsters. And this time it's a "complete rejuvenation."
Shades of Pouter and Ponce de Leon! What does he mean "complete?"
Suppose he can give you back your youthful looks and your beautiful vigor. Can he give you back your young enthusiasm? And your beautiful young digestion? Can he give you back your bright young visions—your hopeful outlook on life when the world was new to you and everything was a wonderful adventure? Can he give you back your young (youthful), which made everything seem so much more glamorous and desirable than it really was? Can he give you back your youthful courage, your faith in human nature and your belief in your own high destiny?
